

ALEXANDRIA, VA.

MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 2.

THE DEMOCRATS of Vermont are now and for many years have been in a sad minority, but during all their long subjection they have kept the fires of their faith burning brightly, and they are as true to their principles to-day as they ever were. At their State convention last Thursday they declared for free raw material, and condemned a tariff that takes bread from the mouths of the poor and gives it to those already enriched by government favoritism, and said that in the violent, unwarranted rushing of the McKinley bill through the House of Representatives they saw evidence of the hasty fulfillment of the bargains of two years ago, "whereby certain contributors to republican campaign funds were to receive governmental aid in their business at the expense of the American consumers." The fruit of such good seed as this cannot, in the nature of things, be delayed much longer.

SENATOR CARLISLE, in response to a letter from a member of the Farmers' Alliance on the subject of the crank scheme to establish government storehouses throughout the country and lend farmers money on their crops at two per cent., says the proposition is preposterous and absurd, but that were it otherwise: "You and I are democrats, and as such we believe that the government should scrupulously abstain from all unnecessary interference with the personal and domestic concerns of its citizens, and confine itself strictly to the administration of purely public affairs." This is the correct idea of the government; as long as it is adhered to strictly there was no serious trouble; but since it was departed from, peace and harmony have gone with it.

MR. EDGAR ALLEN of Richmond and Mr. Clay of Newport News, the former an ex-federal office holder, and the latter, a present one, endorse the most ultra South-hating expressions uttered in the North concerning the unveiling of the Lee statue. And yet both these men, though they fought against Virginia, settled within her borders after the war, and have prospered here, and been well treated by her people. In recognition of this, they manifest their hate for the people among whom they live by joining their enemies in the vain attempt to cast odium upon the memory of one of Virginia's two most distinguished sons. Why, even the wild Arabs of the desert came to be the enemies of the men whose salt they have eaten.

SENATOR HOAR says the Virginia democrat "votes to protect iron ore, coal and sumac, and then turns round and votes to cut down duties on New England cottons and woollens and cutlery to an extent that would seriously injure our industries, and ought not to be encouraged by any New Englander." The Virginia democrat who votes to tax iron ore, coal and sumac, or any other article that is a necessary of life, or that enters into the manufacture of any necessary of life, is in the wrong box, and has no conception of the principles of the party to which he belongs or of those upon which the government under which he lives was founded.

THE FARMERS' Alliance in Alabama, knowing full well that as long as the negroes in their State shall continue to vote as a unit under the direction of a few white scalawags and carpet baggers, the white people there cannot afford to divide, have wisely pooled their issues with their democratic neighbors, and will support the candidates of the latter at the coming State election. The Alliance in all the other southern States will probably do likewise; they certainly will if they have their own interest at heart.

GEN. MAHONE says: "The glory of my life is that I served in General Lee's army." And yet if General Lee were alive and had a desire to reenter the army as an officer, he wouldn't be allowed to do so, because General Mahone, by his one vote, as a member of the U. S. Senate, defeated a motion to repeal the statute, that still stands on the statute books of the government, which prohibits ex-Confederates from holding commissions in the U. S. army. General Mahone's ideas of glory are peculiar.

SO ANXIOUS is the republican administration to expend the Treasury surplus in one half of the country, that an order has been issued from the Interior Department, to the effect that the sentence of a court martial does not affect a man's claim for a pension, and that a convicted and sentenced deserter is as much entitled to a pension as the brave soldier who fought till the war was over. In all countries except this a war pension is an honor. It was so here once, but is so no longer.

How a self-respecting man who fought under the Confederate flag, or the son of such a man, can vote with a party which applauds such attempts as were made last Friday by its leaders to insult that flag, which was furled a quarter of a century ago, and the memory of the man who made its name immortal, is not the least of the many strange things of this eventful age that are past finding out.

AT THE meeting of the "Home Market" Club in Boston last Saturday night the sentiment that evoked the loudest and most unanimous demonstration of applause was the chairman's allusion to Secretary Proctor's refusal to lower the flag on the War Department at the death of the ablest, best and most distinguished Secretary of War the country ever had.

FROM WASHINGTON.

(Special Correspondence of the ALEX. GAZETTE.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 2, 1890.

Major Robert Hunter of Winchester, whose law office is now in this city, who was General Gordon's chief of staff during the war, was much disappointed at not being able to ride at the side of his old commander in the grand procession in Richmond on Thursday last. He thought he had secured a suitable horse for the occasion, but when the beast was brought to Gordon's headquarters at Mr. John P. Branch's, on Franklin street, the Major's usually happy countenance assumed a woeful aspect as that of Don Quixote when about to mount Rozinante. His fore-legs were semi-circular and his knees as bald as the head of a veteran variety theatre goer. It was also minus one eye, and the sight of the other was much bedimmed by the lapse of years and the vicissitudes of scant forage and rough usage. These serious defects could have been partially neutralized by a profuse drapery of bunting, and the ladies, who were present, were consulted on the subject, but while this was going on, it was thought prudent to test the old jade's gait, and a negro boy was put on him for that purpose. The darkey did his best. He spurred and whipped and cussed, but failed signally to develop a motive power equal to a half a knot an hour. This settled the matter. The Major turned to his old chief and said: "General, I will not mar the effect of your superb horsemanship, nor discredit my own, by appearing in the parade upon such a travesty of horse-flesh as that. I came to Richmond to witness the 'unveiling,' but I am sure that purpose will be defeated if I trust to that wretched beast to get me there, and as my own limbs are still good I will march on foot with the veterans and join you at the monument." I may be added that the Major, like most Virginians, is a lover of horses, and has upon his place in King George county, some of the stock of the famous four-mile racer, Harry Bassett, that beat the great Kentucky horse Longfellow.

The Senate finance committee is progressing rapidly with the tariff bill. They have already gotten through with one-fifth of it, without any material changes in it since it came from the House. It is supposed the committee will be ready to report it to the Senate by the latter part of next week, and that it will be rushed through as rapidly as possible.

The delayed caucus of the republicans of the House has been called to night to consider the anti-gerrymander and the federal election bills. The first, as heretofore stated, is supposed to be dead already, and nobody seems to be sorry except Mr. McCann, the representative from the Cumberland district, Maryland, who is in great danger of the loss of his seat by the recent redistricting of that State. With regard to the second, however, it is entirely different, and that bill will, it is generally thought, be endorsed by the caucus. Mr. Lodge will present a majority report in favor of putting the whole machinery of elections in the States under the management and control of the federal government, but excluding the Australian system. Mr. Rowell will present a minority report, recommending the appointment of federal supervisors at all elections, in counties as well as in cities. The former it is supposed will be the one that will be reported to the House and be adopted by Mr. Speaker Reed's process of making quorums by counting members not voting.

Among the relics at the Capitol is the whistle with which John Brown used to summon the poor duped negroes to confer with him in the woods at night near Harper's Ferry when making arrangements to attack that place. It was taken from Brown by Col. Lewis Washington and is now in the possession of a gentleman at the Capitol to whom it was presented by a member of Col. Washington's family. Capt. Bassett, the venerable door keeper of the Senate, has in possession a piece of the stick with which Preston S. Brooks struck Charles Sumner for abusing his uncle, Mr. Butler. The stick was a small and hollow gutter purchase cane, which broke at the first blow, and not a bludgeon, as was represented at the time by Mr. Sumner's friends.

The national republican committee, which met here last week, determined that the disbursement of the congressional campaign fund, which they are already collecting, shall be made by Chairman Quay, and not by the republican congressional campaign committee, as Mr. Quay knows how to place it where it will do the most good. The committee also endorsed the proposition for a national election law, and seemed to think that with such a law a republican majority in the next House would be assured.

Mrs. Judge Stuart, of Alexandria, through the influence of Senator Stewart, of Nevada, has been appointed to an office in the Census Bureau.

A private letter received here from Guthrie, Oklahoma, says that U. S. Marshal Lundy and his deputy, Mr. Points, both of Virginia, received quite an ovation when they arrived there.

Letter from Fauquier.

(Correspondence of the ALEXANDRIA GAZETTE.)

MARSHALL, May 31.—The tornado accompanied by rain and hail which visited Marshall and vicinity Friday at 5 o'clock p. m. has not been equalled in destructiveness since 1867. At noon it was sultry, but hot, when suddenly the storm came, the clouds in the horizon lifted curtain-like and then broke, the furious elements prostrating huge forest and ornamental trees and fences, laying waste gardens and well nigh utterly ruining the wheat crop. The streets and porches of Marshall, and roads in the country were strewn with leaves and ripening fruits, and hail the size of marbles lay an inch thick on the surface. Cattle, horses and farm stock roamed panic-stricken over the country, as the fences were all leveled. The road to Warrenton and the country cross roads were impassable on account of huge trees of every description blown down and completely blocking them up, and there is no communication by telephone.

Dr. Henry Frost had his horse to break away, carrying with him unluckily the doctor's saddle pockets, containing his medicines, etc. There was no loss of life and all the losses are to the poor housekeepers and farmers.

On account of the present hot and wet weather there is some sickness here in the form of mild cases of dysentery.

Quite a number of our citizens went to attend the late grand occasion in Richmond.

The Rev. J. E. Grammer's friends here are elated that he should have so boldly withstood in the late council at Fredericksburg the heresy of non-eternal punishment as enunciated by Rev. Mr. Dame in his sermon, according to the reports of those who attended the council.

The doctors of Fauquier and adjoining counties have again their society and publication, the Virginia Medical Advance, started on a good working basis.

The tin roofers of Brooklyn went on a strike for eight hours to-day.

Senator Carlisle has written a long letter to a member of the Alabama Farmers' Alliance, in which he criticizes the sub-treasury bill. He says the whole scheme in its general form and design is vicious in principle, and, if adopted, would prove in practice ruinous to every interest it is intended to benefit.

The Rev. Sam Small, the Southern evangelist, has been elected president of the Methodist University in Ogdens, Utah. He will move his family there and make Ogdens his future home. This necessitates severing his connection with the Southern Methodist conference and affiliating with the Northern Methodist.

The Home Market Club, of Boston, a collection of republican protection manufacturers, met in Boston on Saturday. Secretary Proctor's refusal to officially recognize the past services of Hon. Jefferson Davis was applauded, and Speaker Reed "received a reception," and tried to explain away the McKinley tariff bill.

By a railroad accident on the Atlantic & Pacific railroad near its junction with the Santa Fe road on Saturday one thousand five hundred sheep on their way from Culpeper to the Chicago market were killed. The Indians of the neighborhood worked all night skinning carcasses, and will have mutton for months to come.

Through the negotiations of the London Contract Company more than $100,000,000 in British gold has been invested in industries in the United States during the past few months. Chief among these industries in attractiveness to British syndicates is the brewing of larger beer. Seventy-seven large breweries have already been bought by English companies.

At an Anarchist meeting in Chicago yesterday, Mrs. Parsons said: "Dynamite was to be the liberator of the human race, not that people would go round with bombs and destroy human life, but that as gunpowder had abolished the powder of the feudal barons, so would dynamite, in the hands of the working classes render the armies of the capitalists useless in a street fight."

The Virginia authorities have arrested a number of residents of Somerset county, Md., who were engaged in scraping for crabs in the territory adjacent to the disputed State line, running north of Tangier Island to Watkins Point, at the mouth of Potomac Sound. Three raids were made, and the men were taken before a local magistrate and committed to the Accomac county jail at Drummondtown.

ALABAMA DEMOCRATS.—The democratic State convention deadlock broke on Saturday, when Thomas G. Jones, of Montgomery, was nominated for Governor. There were unusual scenes of excitement and speeches from all the defeated candidates, including Kolb, the Farmer's Alliance candidate, pledging his support to the nominee. On the balloting every vote not for Kolb was cast for Jones. The result was not announced, as Kolb's friends withdrew his name and moved Jones' nomination by acclamation. Kolb pledged his followers to the support of the ticket and officers, and to canvass the State for the nominee. The utmost harmony now prevails, and the democracy presents a united front. Colonel Jones was born in Macon, Ga., forty-six years ago. At the outbreak of the late war he was a cadet at the Virginia Military Institute, and left that school to enter actively in the service of the Confederate army.

The sale of the ten principal breweries in San Francisco, to the English syndicate for $7,500,000, was consummated to-day.

HOUSE.
This was suspension day in the House, and under a suspension of the rules several bills of no general importance were passed.

Triumph of Surgical Skill.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 2.—A wonderful case is occupying the attention of the physicians at the City Hospital. A month ago Michael Lane assaulted his wife with a pistol and a hammer. One bullet entered her brain, and another her jaw. The skull was fractured by blows in four places, and the scalp on the back of the head was laid open for a distance of four inches. Having inflicted these injuries, Lane choked his wife until he thought the last breath had left her body. Then he leveled the murderous pistol at his own head and committed suicide. But the woman did not die. When the surgeons reached her she was exhausted from loss of blood, and the exudation of brain matter amounted to nearly two ounces. Despite the apparent hopelessness of the case the doctors went to work, removed splintered bits of skull, cleaned the bullet wounds, and used knife and needle with such skill that doubt gave place to hope and hope almost to certainty. The great difficulty encountered—that of draining and cleansing the track of the bullet through the brain—was overcome, and Mrs. Lane, instead of dying, showed promise of ultimate recovery. After days of delirium she has become quiet and docile. There are indications that her mind will remain at least partially blank, but her physical health may be fully regained. Mrs. Lane is fifty-two years old and the mother of nine children.

A Kentucky Duel.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 2.—Last night Et. Lou's cemetery was the scene of the first duel fought in Kentucky for many a long year. The participants in the affair were Thomas Overby, an advertising agent, and Charles Saunders, a travelling man. The quarrel originated from attention paid by both men to Miss Emma Zonor. At the second exchange of shots Saunders received a bullet in his right breast near the top of the shoulder, while another had made a flesh wound in his left arm. His wounds are not considered fatal.

A Warm Reception.

NEW YORK, June 2.—The census enumerators began their work to-day. One of them met with a warm reception in a liquor store. He was unceremoniously hustled out amid a volley of beer glasses, which were thrown at him. He then returned to the place under police escort but was unable to obtain the information he desired. Of the nine hundred and odd to take the census only eight failed to report for duty to-day. The places were filled and their deficiencies will be reported to Washington. The delinquents are liable to fine and imprisonment.

Suicide.

BOSTON, June 2.—Frank Chandler, of Monmouth, Me., aged 60, with steady employment, committed suicide this morning at his lodging house on Bowdoin square. His landlord had been kind to him, and doubtless with the intent to avoid selling the furnishings of his room, he projected his body half way out of a window, cut his throat with a razor and bled to death.

Foreign News.

LONDON, June 2.—The Woman's Federal Union will present a memorial to Mr. Gladstone asking him to include the granting of the franchise to women in the issues to be settled at the next general election for members of Parliament.

The Recent Storm.

Particulars of Friday evening's storm in the upper counties continue to come in. J. Brad, Beverly's barn, near The Plains, was blown down, and a number of cows killed. The residences of C. C. Bradley and R. P. Barry were damaged. The woods about Bethel Academy are down in a body. M. C. Blackwell's barn, near Bethel, was destroyed. The wheat acreage from Warrenton to Rectortown is a complete loss. The train on the Manassas road, when near Rectortown, ran into drifts of hail over a foot deep, and frequently the train men were compelled to remove trees that had blown across the track.

The same storm passed over the best wheat-growing section of Clarke county. The track was about four miles in width, and passed just east of Berryville in a southerly direction. A large number of houses and barns were unroofed and some buildings were blown down. The destruction to the wheat crop was great. Some farmers who had from 100 to 200 acres in wheat will not raise a bushel to the acre. The loss is placed at over $100,000 in Clarke county. Among those whose farms were in the path of the storm and suffered most are: Chas. R. Hardesty, Maj. J. W. Luke, Owen Allen, Dr. C. E. Lippitt, Major H. L. D. Lewis, Leo P. Wheat, Province McCormick, E. P. C. Lewis and others.

The British Parliament resumed to-day after the Whit Sunday. It was stated that neither the French nor English governments had received any information of the landing from a French war ship of men on the coast of Newfoundland.

Letter from Culpeper.

(Correspondence of the Alexandria Gazette.)

MITCHELLS, VA., May 30.—After many very severe rain storms, the weather has apparently settled down to a regular working season, and the farmers are taking full advantage of it by working corn and other crops.

During the past two or three weeks, something has been playing havoc with the growing wheat and field, which before that time looked well and gave promise of a fine yield. They have become red and yellow and sickly looking, and will not pay expenses. Oats, also, where not carefully put in and fertilized, are overrun with weeds and blight, owing to the cool, wet weather.

The peach crop is a perfect failure and the apple less than half a prospect.

The second son of Mr. Elgar Wayland, in riding a colt to church last Sunday morning alone, was thrown in a ditch and laid unconscious and undiscovered for two or three hours, when his father in passing by found him and carried him home, where he laid until the next day before speaking; fortunately no bones were broken, and he now seems to be rapidly recovering.

Every one here and elsewhere, wherever he is known, will regret to learn that the venerable Dr. Philip Slaughter is critically ill.

The greatest interest was manifested hereabouts in the success of the great affair that transpired at Richmond.

The enterprising and accommodating E. & D. R. Co., have furnished the ladies and other patrons of the road with an old fertilizer car as a reception-room since their depot here was burned several months ago.

"THISTLE."

WHIPPED TO DEATH.—A terrible affair is reported from Franklin county. A farmer named Benjamin Russell, living twelve miles west of Rocky Mount, on Friday morning became incensed at his son, ten years of age, for some trivial offence, and took him to the barn, stripped him, and whipped him until the blood flowed from the cuts on his person. He then released the boy, who tottered to the house, and on gaining the door fell at the feet of his mother and immediately expired. On being informed the boy's death the fiendish father rushed to the mountains. The neighborhood is greatly excited, and a posse of men has been formed who will go on the hunt for the man, and they swear that if they catch him they will hang him to the first tree.

PULLED OVERBOARD BY A SHARK.—A huge shark, 12 feet in length, is on exhibition at one of the hotels at Atlantic City, N. J. The shark was captured on Friday by Frederick Lawrence, and Dr. Armstrong, who were fishing about 300 feet out from the shore. The shark got caught on Mr. Lawrence's line and Lawrence was pulled out of the boat. Lawrence, however, held on to the line until he received assistance from Armstrong and another man, who happened to be near in another boat. Lawrence managed to swim to the shore in safety. The shark was landed by Armstrong and his companion after a fierce struggle.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

NEW YORK, June 2.—The stock market opened from 1/4 to 1/2 per cent. lower for the active stocks this morning, in sympathy with the London market, but the depression was short-lived, as a strong tone was immediately developed at the concessions and material advances were scored in the first half hour's trading. The improvement, however, induced freer selling, and in some cases all of the improvement was lost. At 11 o'clock the market was fairly active and steady at but slight changes from the opening prices.
